U.S. Vice President in Erbil to discuss future U.S.-Iraq relations

Erbil, Kurdistan – Iraq (KRG.org) – US Vice President Joseph Biden on Thursday met President Masoud Barzani in Erbil to discuss the United States' relations with Iraq after the military withdrawal at the end of this year, and to reaffirm his country's commitment to the Kurdistan Region and Iraq as a whole.

In 2008, the Iraqi Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki signed an agreement known as the Status of Forces Agreement with US President George W Bush. The agreement stipulates a withdrawal of all US combat forces from Iraq by the end of 2011.

Mr. Biden said, 'All our troops will be withdrawn from Iraq in four weeks' time, but our commitments to Iraq will stay.'

Vice President Biden was received at Erbil International Airport by President Barzani, Prime Minister Barham Salih and Minister Falah Mustafa, the head of the Kurdistan Regional Government's Department of Foreign Relations.

In a meeting that was also attended by Deputy Prime Minister Azad Berwari and Minister of Interior Karim Sinjari, President Barzani reflected on the long-standing relationship that the Kurdish people have shared with the US, and said it was important for such relations to continue after the US forces' departure from Iraq.

President Barzani said, 'I very much appreciate you visiting us today in Kurdistan. We are proud of the special relationship that we have with you. I would like to thank the United States for freeing our people from dictatorship. We appreciate your sacrifices. The democracy and freedom the people of Iraq enjoy today is the result of the sacrifices that you and the Iraqi people have made.'

Both sides touched on political developments in the country as a whole as well as on events in the broader region. Vice President Biden commended the important role the Kurds had played in Baghdad after the fall of the former regime and commended President Barzani for his initiative that led to a new inclusive government last year.

Commenting on this visit, Minister Mustafa said, 'As we approach the departure of US forces in Iraq, next year will mark the beginning of a new era of relations between both sides. We are therefore encouraged to hear from Vice President Biden about the continued US commitment to both Kurdistan and Iraq. It is important for the US Embassy in Baghdad and the Consulate General in Erbil to play a strong role after the withdrawal to pave the way for broader bilateral relations focusing on several areas.'

The Vice President's delegation included the US Ambassador to Iraq James Jeffrey, the Commanding General of US forces in Iraq Llyod Austin, Assistant Secretary of State for Near Eastern Affairs Jeffrey Feltman, Deputy US Secretary of Energy Daniel Poneman, and officials and journalists.

Natural gas: North looks to tap into long-term export potential of vast reserves

By Javier Blas, Financial Times

Let there be light: in contrast to southern Iraq, electricity supplies in Erbil and the surrounding area are almost continuous.

At night, a reddish glare surrounds Basra in hydrocarbon-rich southern Iraq. Yet the city has electricity for just four hours a day; none at the night. The glare is the effect of "flaring", or burning off, vast quantities of natural gas from the huge Rumaila, Zubair and West Qurna oil and natural gasfields.

Erbil, the capital of the semi-autonomous region of northern Iraq, is alight too, though not from the glare of natural gas burning, but because it has electricity 22 hours a day. This is no small matter but is a sign of the different fortunes of the natural gas industries in northern and southern Iraq, with significant implications for the Kurdistan region.

The US Geological Survey estimates Iraqi Kurdistan has 60,000bn cubic feet, more than the estimate for gas reserves in Libya.

While crude oil attracts most attention from industry executives, diplomats are particularly interested in natural gas, because Turkey is short of supplies and Ankara has signaled it is ready to import and serve as a corridor for exports.

Selahattin Cimen, deputy undersecretary at Turkey's Ministry of Energy and Natural Resources, says Kurdistan could supply the country with gas for power generation. "Turkey is the natural direction for exports of hydrocarbons from the region [of Iraqi Kurdistan] to the world's market," he says.

Turkey is particularly keen to import natural gas for power generation, and perhaps build a gas pipeline from the fields near Sulaimaniya, the second-largest city in Kurdistan, to the Turkish Mediterranean port of Ceyhan. Kurdish and Turkish officials talk about building an export facility to super cool natural gas so it can be transported by ship, although industry executives say such a facility is years, if not decades, away.

Aydin Selcen, Turkish general consul in Erbil, says his country depends on Russian natural gas for 70 per cent of its imports. "The most commercial alternative seems to be the Kurdistan Regional Government (KRG). We have a long shared border."

Turkey is even talking about connecting an export pipeline from Kurdistan to the projected Nabucco pipeline, which would link the gas-rich Caucasus and Central Asia to energy-hungry European nations.

A second option suggested by officials in Baghdad, and with less support in Erbil, is the so-called Arab Gas Pipeline (AGP) project.

According to the US Department of Energy, the AGP would deliver gas to Syria and then to Lebanon and the Turkish border. But the recent violence in Syria means the project faces an uncertain future.

While plans for exports mature, in Kurdistan the domestic natural gas industry is growing rapidly. The biggest companies are Crescent Petroleum and its affiliate, Dana Gas, which signed an agreement in April 2007 with the KRG to develop several gas fields. Two years later, the companies signed a deal with OMV of Austria and MOL of Hungary to develop two key fields.

The companies started production in October 2008, with the gas supplying local power stations that produced about 1,620 megawatts of electricity – about the same as a nuclear power plant.

"This has ensured an almost continuous power supply for 4m people in the Kurdistan region, in contrast to the electricity crisis in other parts of Iraq, and has provided savings of over $2bn annually in fuel costs for the government," says Majid Jafar, chief executive of Crescent Petroleum.

But analysts believe the export market will be the most important over the medium term. "In the absence of local demand, gas exports remain the only option of monetizing these large discoveries [of natural gas]," Citigroup wrote on a recent report about the oil and gas sector in Kurdistan.

Congressman West Meets with Kurdistan Government

(WASHINGTON)--- Congressman Allen West (R-FL) released this statement today after meeting with leaders of the Kurdistan Regional Government Delegation; including Fuad Hussein, Chief of Staff to President Masoud Barzani, Falah Bakir, head of the KRG Dept. of Foreign Relations, Ashti Hawrami, Minister of Natural Resources and Qubad Talabani, the KRG Representative to the U.S:

"As a 22-year United States Army Veteran who served in Iraq and worked alongside the Kurdish people, I can tell you by experience that the Kurdish people and the Kurdistan government are now and have always been a strong ally to the United States. Their region in the Northern part of Iraq has been continually under attack, and now as United States troops are set to withdraw from Iraq, the Kurds are concerned for their physical and economic security, and rightfully so, as regional powers are poised to play a central role in the Iraqi government.

According to Mr. Hussein, the Obama Administration has told the Kurds they are 'special friends.' It is time for the Administration to define what that relationship means and what if anything the United States is willing to do to help secure a safe and prosperous Kurdistan.

Some of the Kurdistan government concerns, include: What is America's strategic, long-term vision for Iraq? How will the Regional influences affect the Kurdistan region? and What kind of influence can the Kurds have in Iraq when only three percent of the Iraqi military currently is Kurdish?

The solutions to these questions are reachable. First and foremost, Kurdistan must be respected and included as part of the Iraqi constitution. The United States must also work to help develop more economic opportunities in Kurdistan, including greater United States participation in the oil and gas sector. Another important solution includes encouraging Iraq to examine Federalism as part of its government structure, and to create a central government that shares power with different areas of the country.

The Kurdish people are the largest ethnic group in the world without a country. They are pro-American and have proven to be a strong ally to the United States during the war in Iraq. America owes it to the Kurds to make sure they are treated with respect and included during this transition. As President Obama met with Iraqi Prime Minister Nuri Kamal al-Maliki today, the Kurds also want their voice heard. The Kurdistan government is asking us loud and clear, to not forget about their people during this time of great uncertainty. The consequences of a divided Iraq could be disastrous."

Some Major U.S. Hotels Moving into Iraq

Some major U.S. hotel chains are planning to go into Iraq just as the last of U.S. troops are pulling out.

Best Western recently broke ground on two hotels in Erbil, the capital city of Iraqi Kurdistan in the northern part of the country. Hilton Worldwide is set to open Double Tree Suites by Hilton Erbil at the end of 2013. And Marriott International will open two properties there in 2014.

Hotel executives say they see an opportunity in northern Iraq, which is attracting so much foreign investment because of its oil and gas reserves that a new airport opened there last year.

The area is also considered relatively safe, having severed ties with Saddam Hussein after the 1990-91 Persian Gulf War. As a result, it was spared the fighting that the capital, Baghdad, and other parts of the country endured from the 2003 war. Its scenic beauty and archaeological ruins also earned it a spot on National Geographic's "20 best trips of 2011."

"If you look at the strong demand that will come from business and leisure travelers, and that there's a shortage of supply of hotels ... that makes this appealing to us," says David Kong, Best Western International president and CEO.

Kong says the company is considering deals for two other hotels in Sulaimaniyah and Dohuk, also in Iraqi Kurdistan.

"This is a very positive sign of the potential Iraq has to offer," says Victoria Berry, senior strategist of Future Brand North America, a brand-consulting firm. Still, she says, "the perceptions of safety, especially in terms of war, corruption and crime, as well as the lack of modern infrastructure, are key areas that could impact negatively on Iraq's ability to appeal to a base of leisure tourists."

Hotel executives acknowledge that, for now, the properties will appeal more to business travelers than to Western tourists because of occasional skirmishes with neighboring Turkey and questions about the rest of the country's stability after the U.S. pullout.

"There will be tremendous tourism opportunities some day," says Ed Fuller, president and managing director of international lodging for Marriott International. "But I think that's distant in the future."

Executives of all three brands say they will have security measures in place to protect their employees and clients. Security is "always front and center of our thinking, but that is something we're very experienced dealing with," says Ian Carter, president of global operations and development for Hilton Worldwide.

Hilton's Double Tree will have 200 suites, a business center, health club, two restaurants and a lobby lounge and bar. Marriott's properties will include a 200-room Marriott Hotels & Resorts hotel and a 75-unit Marriott Executive Apartments property. The Best Western Premier Erbil Hotel will have 160 rooms and 20 suites, while the Best Western Premier Erbil Airport will have 82 rooms.

Senior Kurdistan Region delegation highlights Kurdistan's successes to U.S. Officials

Washington DC - United States of America (KRG.org) - A senior delegation from the Kurdistan Region today concluded a visit to the United States by highlighting the successes in Iraqi Kurdistan since 2003, while calling on the US government not to lose sight of the country despite the American troop withdrawal.

The delegation consisted of Dr Fuad Hussein, Chief of Staff of Kurdistan Region President Masoud Barzani, Dr Ashti Hawrami, the Minister of Natural Resources, Minister Falah Mustafa, the head of the Department of Foreign Relations, and Qubad Talabani, the Kurdistan Regional Government Representative to the US.

The delegation met with senior officials from both the executive and legislative branches of the US government. The Kurdish officials held further discussions with senior State Department officials including Assistant Secretary of State Jeffrey Feltman and met numerous friends in Congress including Senators John McCain and Joe Lieberman as well as House Foreign Affairs Committee Chairwoman Ileana Ros-Lehtinen and Middle East Subcommittee Chairman Steve Chabot, Congressman Allen West and many other members of the Kurdish American Congressional Caucus.

The delegation also had timely meetings with leading U.S. corporations committed to doing business in the Kurdistan Region as well as American companies already investing in the Region and impressed upon them the KRG's commitment to Iraq's constitution.

"Iraq's security and stability requires political leaders to implement the principles of power sharing and wealth sharing as required by the constitution. Therefore, as recently agreed with Prime Minister Maliki, the KRG is preparing to submit a draft law for revenue-sharing and management of the hydrocarbons to the Council of Representatives for their consideration," said Minister Hawrami.

During their discussions, the Kurdish officials shared their views and concerns and were open about the challenges that lie ahead in Iraq. They highlighted both the economic and political progress in Kurdistan and stressed that the Region's relative safety and security has allowed it to develop and thrive, and be a positive model for other parts of Iraq.

Reiterating the importance of the visit, Representative Talabani said, "Kurdistan is a great success story in post-war Iraq and it is important for my government to tell that story to Americans, whether in government, in Congress in academia or in the private sector."

KRG Representative to U.S. highlights strengthening relations with Turkey

Washington DC - (KRG.org) USA - Qubad Talabani, Representative to the US of the Kurdistan Regional Government (KRG), highlighted the strengthening relationship between the Kurdistan Region and Turkey at a debate convened by the Atlantic Council and the Middle East Institute.

Mr. Talabani was featured on a panel alongside Dr Henri Barkey of Lehigh University last week.

During the discussion, Representative Talabani confirmed that there is more political understanding and cooperation between KRG with the Turkish government. "As dialogue continues," he said, "we have a chance of creating a much stronger and more stable link that nobody would have thought possible only a few years ago." The foundation of this strategic relationship lies in Kurdistan's development of its oil and gas sector, which is already strengthening economic ties between the two governments.

Regarding the ongoing tension between Turkey and the PKK, Mr. Talabani informed the audience that Kurdistan Region President Masoud Barzani has repeatedly called on the PKK to follow a peaceful approach and abandon violence. "The political process must not be derailed," said Representative Talabani, "and it will require brave and unpopular decisions from both parties." He also stressed that the conflict is not simply a military issue; therefore, it cannot be solved through force.

Representative Talabani also emphasized the vital role played by Kurds in Iraq's political process. Among many initiatives, he said that Iraqi President Jalal Talabani has offered to host a national conference to help settle the political stalemate caused by the recent disputes between Iraq's Sunni and Shi'a factions.

Mr. Talabani also said that more and more Iraqi Arab political groups and politicians are discussing Iraq-wide federalism as a solution to the country's ongoing political problems.

Questions were posed to Representative Talabani regarding the fate of the Kurdish community in Syria, and whether it would join the opposition to the Assad regime. "The Kurds have always been in the opposition to the Syrian government," answered Mr. Talabani. He added, "The rights of Kurdish people were not recognized as a people and their rights were denied."

He concluded by saying that the "Iraqi Kurdish leadership has advised the Syrian Kurds to be united and follow a peaceful path for democracy."

On Eve of Kurdish New Year, President Barzani delivers key address

Salahaddin, Kurdistan Region of Iraq (KRP.org) – In his annual message on the occasion of Newroz, the Kurdish New Year, President Barzani said that power-sharing in Iraq and commitment to the Iraqi Constitution are under threat and that the Kurds will decide their own course of action if these two principles are abandoned.

"Iraq is facing a serious crisis. We have tried our utmost to prevent Iraq from descending into a sectarian conflict and we have consistently avoided taking sides in this conflict. The Kurds have played a pivotal role in bringing about the new Iraq, particularly two years ago when our initiative resulted in the formation of the current government. Had it not been for our role, one can only guess what an unknown fate would have beset Iraq. It is very unfortunate that a small number of people in Baghdad have imposed themselves and monopolized power," said the President.

He said there are a number of main disputes with the Baghdad government.

"Power-sharing and partnership between Kurds, Sunni and Shiite Arabs, and others is now completely non-existent and has become meaningless. The Iraqi Constitution is constantly violated and the Erbil agreement, which was the basis upon which the current government was formed, has been completely ignored. As soon as they came to power, they disregarded the Constitution, the previous agreements that we had, and the principle of power-sharing."

On disputes between Erbil and Baghdad, the President said: "The resolution of the status of Kirkuk and other disputed areas has constantly been evaded. We have shown utmost flexibility and patience and here I want to thank our people for their patience. We have opted for a resolution based on legal and constitutional means but others have reneged on their pledges. It is impossible for us to abandon this issue because for us it is extremely significant and more than being a mere matter of principle."

He said the other main issue is allocation of funds for the Kurdistan Region Peshmerga forces which the Iraqi government has consistently refused to address, saying, "for the last five or six years funding for Peshmerga forces has been embezzled."

On the dispute regarding oil and gas exploration and management, the President defended the legality of the oil and gas contracts that the KRG has signed.

"None of the KRG contracts with foreign oil companies is unconstitutional. The main reason behind this dispute with Baghdad is not a question of legality of the contracts; rather it is that they don't want to see the KRG make progress and stride forward."

On monopolization of power in Baghdad, the President stated that power is being concentrated in the hands of a few people and others in the political process are being marginalized, including Shiites.

"There is an attempt to establish a one-million strong army whose loyalty is only to a single person. Where in the world can the same person be the prime minister, the chief of staff of the armed forces, the minister of defense, the minister of interior, the chief of intelligence and the head of the national security council."

The President dismissed statements that the Kurdish-Shiite alliance is close to collapse, saying, "We are committed to our alliance with the Shiites but not with this group of people who have monopolized power and with their policies have even marginalized other Shiites. The Kurds and the followers of Ammar Al-Hakim and Muqtada Al-Sadr have always shown solidarity with each other."

"It is time to say enough is enough. The current status of affairs is unacceptable to us and I call on all Iraqi political leaders to urgently try and find a solution otherwise we will return to our people and will decide on whatever course of action that our people deem appropriate."

U.S. Representative Highlights KRG's efforts on Women's Rights

Washington DC, USA (KRG.org) – The Kurdistan Regional Government's Representative to the US on March 27th highlighted the government's steps to protect women and promote their participation in public and political life.

At an Ambassadors' roundtable event convened by several women's and business organizations, the Kurdistan Regional Government's (KRG) Representative Mr. Qubad Talabani said that in the past two decades the government has intensified efforts to address women's problems and honour-based killings.

He said, "Today in Iraqi Kurdistan, honour killings are no longer legally excused. Police are much more likely to arrest perpetrators suspected of carrying out honour crimes, and judges are increasingly handing out stiffer sentences against those convicted of honour-related homicides."

Mr. Talabani pointed to the Kurdistan Parliament's vital role, in issuing necessary legislation, especially when it passed the first Family Violence Law that outlaws the practice of female genital mutilation (FGM) and criminalizes domestic violence.

"A lot of these legislative reforms are also possible because of an increase in the number of female legislators. In the Iraqi Kurdistan Region's Parliament, 30 percent of the seats are allocated to women," Mr. Talabani said. "The greater number of female Parliamentarians has meant that issues that matter to Kurdish women are increasingly being proposed, debated and passed into law," he added.

As another sign of improving women's protection in Kurdistan Region, Mr. Talabani stressed that Kurdistan is the only part of Iraq where government-supported women's shelters exist, and where women threatened with violence can be protected.

The roundtable was held to discuss women's causes around the world in the month of March, known as Women's History Month, and was organized by the Center for Women in Business at the US Chamber of Commerce, the Center for the International Private Enterprise, and the Diplomatic Courier Magazine.

Regarding the challenges facing the KRG, Mr. Talabani mentioned that the government needs to provide training for the law enforcement, courts, health care providers and other government employees to better understand and respond to the problem of gender-based violence, and to promote a stronger application of these new laws.

Mr. Talabani concluded by saying that the law is one important tool to bring about social change, but it needs to take place alongside greater public awareness and advocacy to change how people think about issues of shame, honour and the role of women and girls in our society.

President Barzani concludes official visit to United States

Washington, USA (KRG.org) – President Barzani concluded his official visit to Washington after a week of meetings with the President and Vice President of the United States, other top US administration officials, business leaders, academics, the media and members of the Kurdish community.

In his meetings at the White House, President Barzani discussed developments in Iraq and expressed his concerns about the current political crisis that has engulfed the country. He described his discussions as constructive and encouraging.

"The most important point is that both President Obama and Vice President Biden reaffirmed that the United States is committed to its close and historic relationship with Kurdistan and the Kurdish people, and also reaffirmed support for a federal, democratic and unified Iraq," said President Barzani.

The President also met top State and Defense department officials, where they discussed bilateral relations and security challenges facing Iraq as well as agreeing on ways to broaden the services provided by the US Consulate in Erbil.

Speaking to an audience at the Washington Institute for Near East Policy, President Barzani provided an outlook on the current political and security challenges facing Iraq and the wider region. He said that if a solution to the increasing centralization of power in the Iraqi Prime Minister's hands cannot be negotiated, the prospects for stability and progress will be bleak. Following his remarks, President Barzani took questions from the audience on a wide range of issues, from oil to the crisis in neighboring Syria, to his call for the PKK to abandon violence and seek a peaceful resolution with Turkey. (Watch the video of his speech on the website of the Washington Institute for Near East Policy)

As part of the President's outreach to the business community, President Barzani participated in a roundtable board meeting of the US-Kurdistan Business Council, an organization established to promote trade and business between the US and Kurdistan. The President was also received by the President of the US Chamber of Commerce, where he highlighted the stable and secure business and investment climate in Kurdistan and encouraged more American businesses to participate in Kurdistan's remarkable growth.

President Barzani met with the Chairman, President and CEO of Exxon Mobil, Mr. Rex Tillerson. The Exxon Mobil chairman reaffirmed what he had previously stated publicly, that the company will continue its operations in the Kurdistan Region. The oil major signed a contract with the Kurdistan Regional Government (KRG) last year to explore six fields in Kurdistan. Despite speculation to the contrary, Mr. Tillerson said that Exxon Mobil is committed to the contracts it has signed with both the Iraqi government and with the KRG.

The President concluded his visit by meeting with the Kurdish community in the Washington area and briefing them on the latest developments in Iraq and on his meetings in Washington, and he also visited the Iraqi Embassy. He left Washington for Budapest, where he will meet the President and Prime Minister of Hungary.

President Barzani was accompanied by the General Director of the KRG Security Protection Agency, Masrour Barzani; Chief of Staff, Dr Fuad Hussein; Minister for Natural Resources, Dr Ashti Hawrami; Head of the KRG Department of Foreign Relations, Minister Falah Mustafa; and the KRG Representative to the US, Qubad Talabani. He was received by the Iraqi Ambassador, the KRG Representative and State Department officials.

Salahaddin, Kurdistan Region (KRP.org) – President Barzani yesterday welcomed U.S. Ambassador to Iraq James Jeffery and Chief of the Office of Security Cooperation-Iraq General Robert Caslen in Salahaddin to discuss the current political crisis facing Iraq.

Both sides underlined the importance of urgently resolving the current crisis through constitutional means and by respecting the existing agreements between the political blocs. They also emphasized the need for genuine power-sharing and expressed their support for any decision that Iraqis may take within the framework of the constitution.

U.S. Congressional Staff Visit Kurdistan

Erbil, Kurdistan Region, Iraq (KRG.org) - A large delegation of US Congressional staff visited the Kurdistan Region last week to meet with government officials, local businesses and schools, and to get a first hand view of how US-KRG relations can be further developed and improved.

"This was the first Congressional staff delegation of its kind and size to the Kurdistan Region," said a member of the Kurdistan Regional Government (KRG) Representation office in the US. "The delegation visited all three Kurdistan provinces, gaining a thorough understanding of the region and how the US business community is a true partner in its development."

Commenting on the delegation's visit to the Region, the Head of the KRG Department of Foreign Relations Minister Falah Mustafa said, "The political, institutional and developmental success of Kurdistan is a shining example of what can be achieved through the pursuit of our shared values with the United States. We have a long history with the US, and we believe that greater commercial, cultural and educational exchange between us is long overdue."

While in Erbil the Congressional staff met with local representatives of the newly established United States-Kurdistan Business Council (USKBC) in order to both hear and see first-hand how US investment is at work in Kurdistan.

The delegation received an insightful briefing from US Consul General Alex Laskaris during the visit, and spent an afternoon at the campus of the American University of Iraq - Suleimani (AUIS), holding informative talks with both the students and faculty there.
